

L.W. "Red" Davis Award

The recipient of the 2023 L.W. "Red" Davis Award is Daniel J. Becker, PE.

Dan is a native of south-central Pennsylvania. He attended Penn State University, with a degree in Civil Engineering, and is a licensed professional engineer in Pennsylvania and New York.

He founded and is the owner of his namesake engineering firm, Becker Engineering, a Lancaster County based consulting group serving municipal water and sewer authorities as well as local municipalities.

Twenty-seven years ago, he was appointed to the East Cocalico Township Authority board and has served as chairman for the past 16 years.

In addition to serving on the East Cocalico board, he has been:

- PMAA Region 4 Director
- PMAA President in 2017
- PMAA Legislative Committee Chairman
- PMAA Conference Committee Chairman
- PMAA Unemployment Compensation Trustee
- Member of Pennsylvania Water Environment Association
- Water Environment Federation
- Eastern Pennsylvania Water Pollution Control Operators Association
- Lancaster County Solid Waste Management Authority Citizens Advisory Committee
- Voting Member of East Cocalico Township's local Intermunicipal Group

When he's not providing his expertise at a local municipal or authority board meeting or volunteering his time as such in his own community, you can likely find him enjoying the solitude of a tree stand in the Canadian wilderness.
